The usual amount of steam used to do sawing with by the Portible Circular Saw Mill is from 125 to 150 pounds pressure per square inch. I have reduced this amount and require only from 60 to 30 pounds per square inch, at which steam is not considered in the least dangerous, and is, at the same time, more economical in the saving of fuel, &c. We append the following certificate of the first of my new style Portable Mills, for the noting and careful perusal of sawyers and all those desiring to purchase, and solicit a call and careful examination, they now being ready on hand and making, mounted on four strong wooden wheels, with wide tires and heavy iron axies, easily drawn from a place, and always ready for operation in a few hours, or mounted on legs and wooden skids, or otherwise: Important Notice.
